

New Life Master

Debbie Hunt

Debbie started playing bridge years ago and was a casual player who played terribly. She finally made a decision to try to learn the game and once she made that commitment Debbie was hooked. She played kitchen bridge with friends and then took duplicate lessons. When Debbie and her friend played their first duplicate game they were terrified and their hands were shaking. They came in dead last but went back again. Debbie soon learned that learning bridge was so much easier when she could see how conventions were actually bid (She loved seeing bids on the table). It was also fun to play defence even when she didn't get any cards.

Debbie took a long time to achieve her LM because she played most of her bridge at the club level. Debbie attended tournaments when she could and enjoyed them a lot.

Debbie's main take away from learning bridge is the friendships and the fact it brings together people of all ages and skill levels. She looks forward to playing until she can't.
