

Ron Chalmers New NABC Master

Ron started playing bridge in 1960, back in the days of four-card majors and excesses of table talk and telling gestures. He only became semi-serious 20 years ago when he discovered the Edmonton Bridge Centre.

Ron's modest success is due to the patience of his two regular partners, Don Carson and Wayne Shaw, to his friend Bill Dryden who helped him earn some red points, and to all the EBC players who, in his own words, tolerate his painfully slow play.
